As counsel for Adolph Segal in the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company's case against the Sugar trust, It must be conceded, however, that the Mr. Untermyer has had opportunity to prove how efficacious the present laws may be made in handling the big trusts. Consequently there is especial interest when he says:

interest when he says:

"There never has been an honest, intelligent effort to enforce the ample provisions of the law against any of the monster monopolies.

"The Government has had no trouble in convicting and driving out of business a few poor, struggling comparatively harmless combinations that were put together to prevent bankruptcy and secure a small profit. But the financial 'buccaneers' who have been holding up the country in the necessities of life, keeping out foreign competition through the tariff at one end and crushing home competition at the other, until the increase in the cost of living is alarming, have remained immune until every lawyer who has had to deal with this big question knows that the pretended enforcement of the law is a huge farce.

"Every time the Government has had a chance to enforce the criminal provisions of the law (which constitute the only effective part, the others being mainly academic) it has run.

"There are always so many reasons for not doing things that it is never difficult to find one. We learned that lesson in the recent ventilation of corporate dishonesty, when every exposed criminal went unpunished—the most of them back at the old game on slightly modified lines, including the subsidizing of a part of the press through extravagant advertising at the policyholders' expense and jeering at discomfited muck-rakers."

Nobody believes anything of the kind; nobody believes anybody else believes anything of the kind. The man who pretends to think Aldrich is sincere in advocacy of such a measure knows that nobody will believe either he or Aldrich is sincere. It is too late for the chairman of the Finance Committee to pose as the conservator of Roosevelt ideals and the sponsor for the progressive policies of the Republican party. He has been too uniformly and too long opposed to those things.
